Central

We of Central lead an interesting life. We are kept busy by a never-ending flow of work and activity. There are sports the year around, homecoming, tests, and of course those daily assignments. However all these things blend into well-rounded schooling for everyone. We of Cen-Trails invite you to come along and we'll take a look at our life . . . ON THE SCENE AT CENTRAL.

THE DRINKING fountain in the main hall proved a good place to relate the latest jokes or gripes about classwork and tests.

Fun, Fads, and

TIME NEVER proved to be so precious as not to spend a few minutes with friends recoursing the latest activities.

THE UNMISTAKEABLE sound of the class kept Centralites on the move in the busy hallways.

THE STUDY hall was always the scene of action, as the assignments kept the students working.

Fancy Gadgets Help Pass Our Days

OUTSIDE READING was made more appealing by the addition of new shelving and a check-out desk in the library.

PHYS. ED. and intramurals provided ample exercise for everyone.

HUNGRY CENTRALITES wait in line while savory aromas taint the air.

IN THE evenings, adult classes were held to illustrate newer methods and machines.

WITHIN THESE WALLS? Yes, it was here that many hard hours were spent producing the Greyhound Gazette and Cen-Trails.

THE CEN-TRAILS cameraman caught many centralites in the act of being themselves, as here in a last period class.

AFTER-DINNER nourishment was provided again this year by the sale of candy in the lobby of the gym.

Good Meals and Candy Bars Fill Our Stomachs;

CENTRAL'S COOKS, as always, provided Centralites with a tasty noon meal.

BROWSING AROUND the halls was a favorite noon-hour pastime.

Fads, Fun, and Work Our Days . . .

REWARDS FOR hard work came for some students when the Honor Society "tagged" its new members.

On January 26, 1962, royalty reigned supreme as these couples took their places on the stage.

ACADEMICS

ON THE SCENE

AT CENTRAL . . .

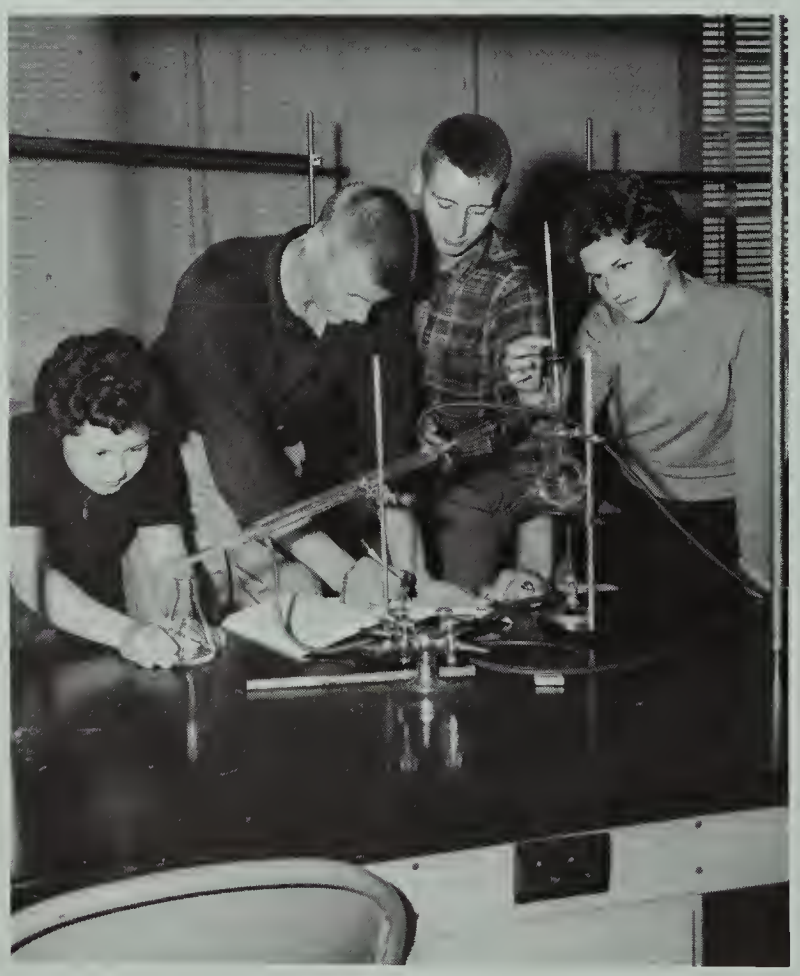
ELIZABETH SAPP, John Steffen, and Jim Hill examine the life-like manikin for their biology studies.

With the addition of a new course, Central's science department was busier than ever. The freshman biology classes, under the direction of Mr. Green and Mr. Watson, collected insects and leaves at the beginning of the year. Later on, they studied root growth and root structures, and dissected frogs and crayfish.

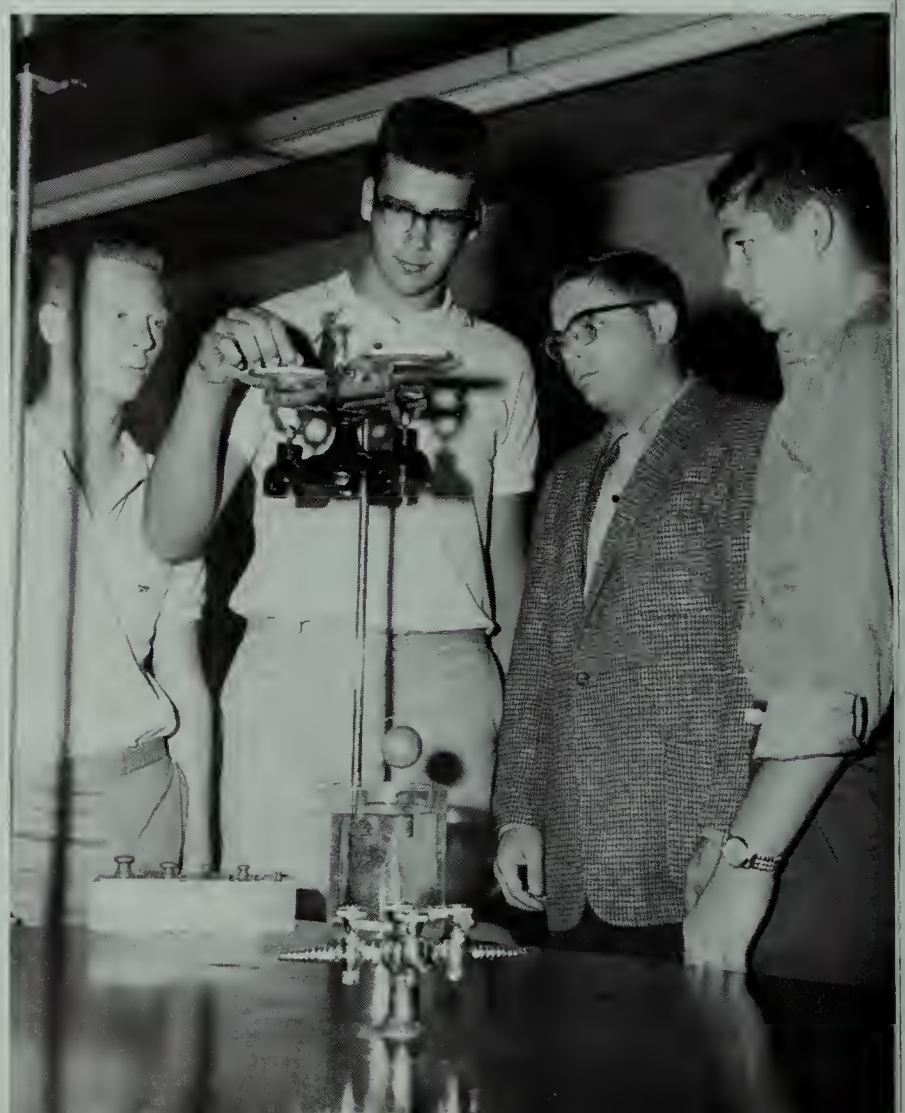
This year, for the first time, both physics and chemistry were offered. Under Mr. Allspaw, the juniors in the chem class learned many things, the most important of which was the proper procedure for chemical analysis. In the physics class, Mr. Allspaw taught the seniors the resolution of forces, stresses and strains, and other items with technical applications.

Math and Science Give

SAUNDRA MATTAX, Mark Frauhiger, Steve Schlickman, and Karen Rich perform the distillation of water.

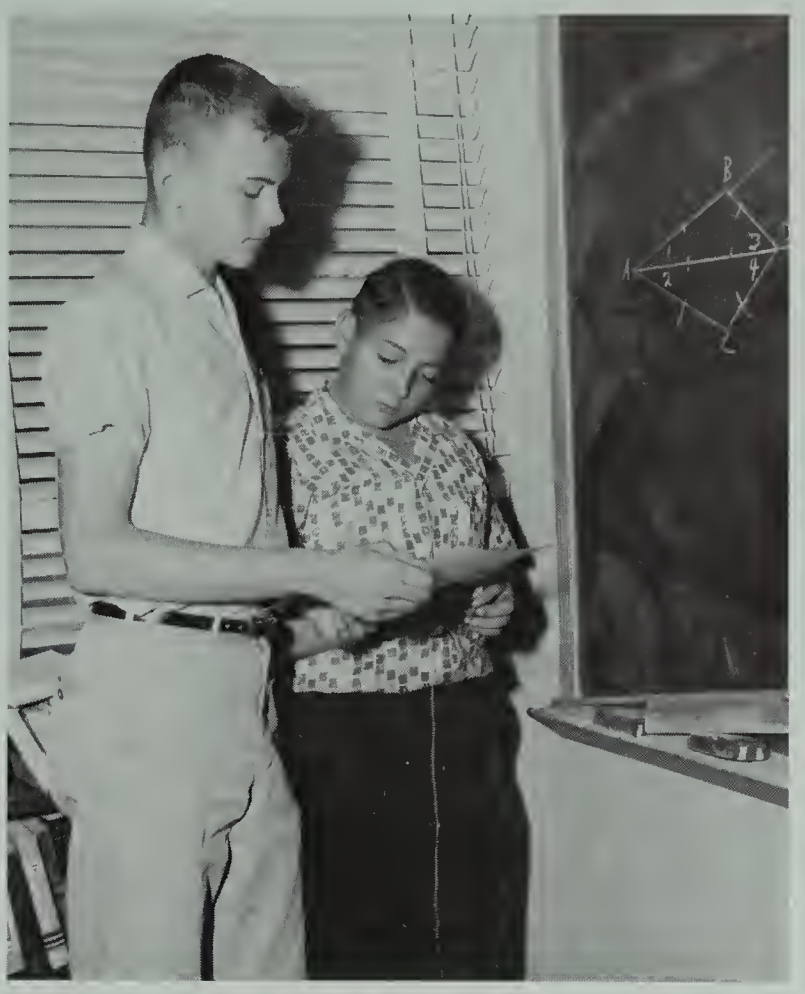


MR. ALLSPAW watches closely as Bill McMillen, Dick Habegger, and Bob Heyerly find the specific gravity of a floating object.



MISS BEAVERS observes as the freshman algebra class tackles an equation.

STEVE LEHMAN and Larry Johnson explain a drawing to the class.



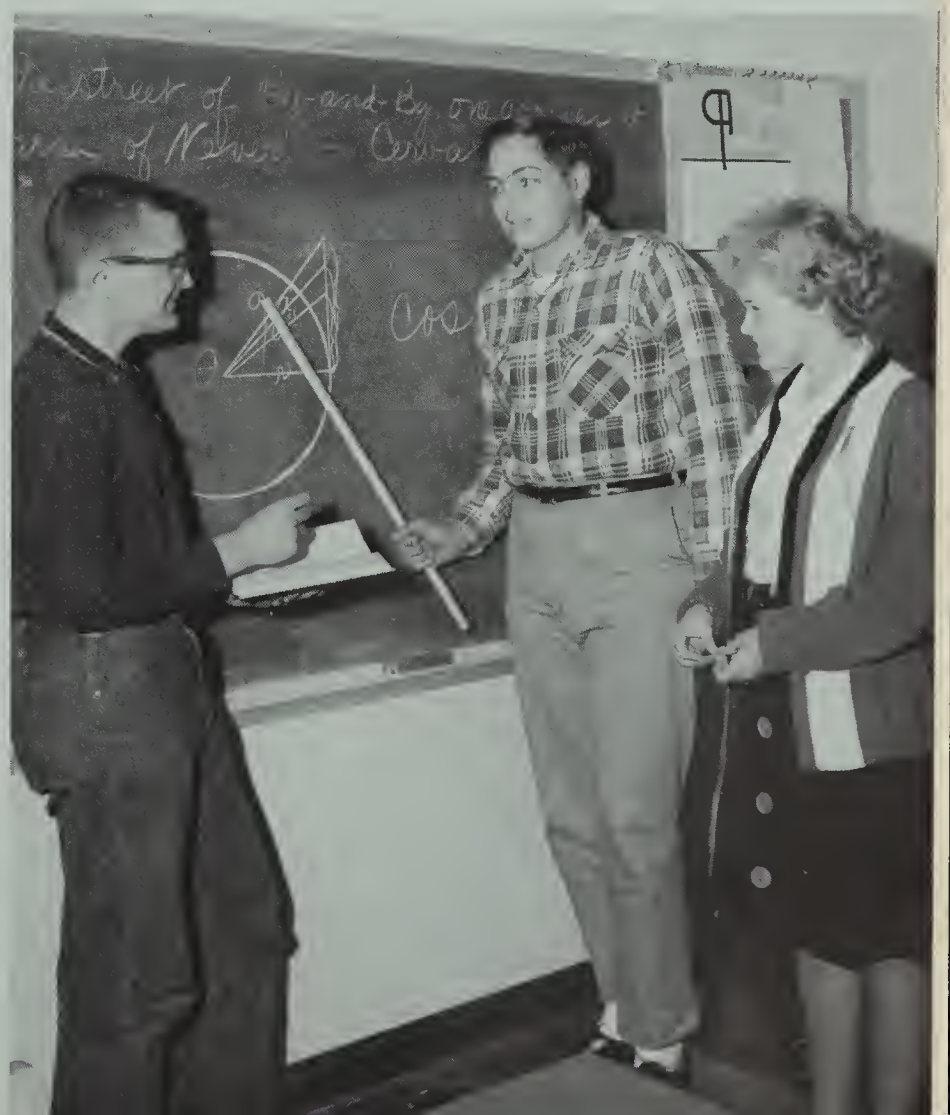
Technical Training

Of the three R's, 'Rithmetic at A.C. consists of: general math, algebra, plane geometry, trigonometry, and solid geometry. The freshmen were required to take math, and were given a choice between general math and algebra. The frosh that took general math studied the fundamentals of whole numbers, fractions, and decimals. They also studied simplified forms of bookkeeping, algebra, geometry, and trigonometry.

In algebra I, the fifty-three students learned how to solve problems with practical applications. The twenty sophomores in plane geometry dealt with problems of figures on a level plane.

The trig class studied the functions of the right triangle. The latter part of the year, they studied solid geometry.

HARRIS HALBERSEN points out a technicality of the functions to Ron Meyers and Sharlene Wagley.



THE STUDENTS in Mr. Shoup's English class lend themselves to their books to seek answers for those never-ending daily assignments.

Languages Are Learned

Sentence structure, speeches, outlines, term papers - - - these were just some of the obstacles encountered by the students as Mrs. Stucky, Miss Beavers, Mr. Shoup, and Mr. Sprunger put the upper four grades through their paces in Rhetoric this year. In Latin I, the students enjoyed learning how to speak and translate the "dead" language. Latin II students probed deeper into structures and the history of this unique language, learning more of the how's and why's than they had the previous year. Both levels of study proved useful in the study of the English dialect.

MRS. STUCKY, Maris Moeschberger, and Imogene Steffen re-examine their books to check their translations for accuracy.

IN THE U.S. History class, Joan Brown and Mr. Igney show Becky Collins where the answer to her question lies.

EDDIE BEER shows Nancy Bertsch the location of the place they are studying in World History.

BARBARA BRANDENBURG shows Dick Schwartz the structure of democracy.

Historians Study the Past

History is a written account of the events effecting a nation, usually told by an explanation of their causes. History is divided at Central into two groups. World history, taught to the sophomores by Mr. Haggard, and U.S. History, taught to the juniors by Mr. Igney.

The senior sections are taught jointly by Mr. Igney and Mr. Shoup. These sections are: U.S. Government, the study of making rules and providing services that help people live together; and sociology, the science of why people act as they do.

LINDA CONRAD learns from Mr. Hoopingarner the proper installation of a new typewriter ribbon.

JUDY ARNOLD and Annie Singleton keep their pencils busy as Mrs. Archbold gives them dictation.

Career Training Is

DON HOAGLAND, Jocelyn McCullough, and Janelle Roth work together at balancing their practice receipts.

Central offers many business courses for students planning to enter into commercial occupations after graduation. These courses also proved profitable to students planning to attend college.

The courses were as follows: shorthand, typing, secretarial training, and bookkeeping.

Mrs. Archbold taught shorthand and secretarial training; Mr. Hoopingarner, typing; and Mr. Bryan, bookkeeping.

Many skills were gained through the vocational courses. In home economics, Mrs. Nielsen taught modern methods of cooking and sewing. Also, the girls planned their own weddings, and studied child care and home furnishings.

Under the direction of Mr. Watson, the ag boys learned more about farming. They studied the soil, soil fertilization, and crop and livestock management. They also put out their usual line of good judging teams.

In industrial arts, Mr. Collier taught the boys skills useful for years to come. Among these were: woodworking, electricity, welding, and architectural drawing.

BECKY COLLINS and Carolyn Hart look on, as Barbara Wolff puts the finishing touch to an apron.

Acquired by Vocational Courses

SAM HEYERLY, David Sommer, Ron Schwartz, and Marvin Fosnaugh listen as Mr. Watson explains various kinds of seeds.

LEO PARRISH, John Ross, Ned Mitchell, and Ralph Parrish work on their drawings in the architectural drawing class.

I KNOW, I know! seems to say the expression on one pupils face as Mrs. Furhman points out a note.

The grade music classes, under the direction of Mr. Henkel and Mrs. Furhman, learned many constructive ideas. These classes helped to bring out the musical ability in each student. The pupils learned to read notes, keep time, and to sing songs. They also listened to a variety of music. The art department, as in other years, did a wide variety of work this year. The high school students made pottery, jewelry, paintings, and mosaics. They also extended a helping hand to provide the props and background settings for the many social activities. In the spring the department held its annual art exhibit.

Art and Music Classes Develop Interest in the Arts

MR. FEASEL points out the highlights of a painting to Toni Rupert, Dave Hamilton, and Deanna Maines.

PUSH-UPS are only one of the many exercises used in the freshman phys. ed. class.

What can reduce traffic accidents? Teaching drivers proper operation, common courtesy, and the correct traffic rules. These are just a few of the many things that Mr. Bryan taught to his driver training students.
Physical education helped our freshmen and sophomores learn the rules of the many and varied sports activities carried on at Central. Most important, though, it taught teamwork and sportsmanship. Mrs. Archbold and Mr. Miller, in their health classes as well, stressed to each student the importance of these traits, along with the need for good health, to wholesome living.

Physical Fitness, Health, and Safety Are Stressed

MR. BRYAN looks on, as Stan Biberstein shows Jane Jennings and Susan Frank how to change a tire.

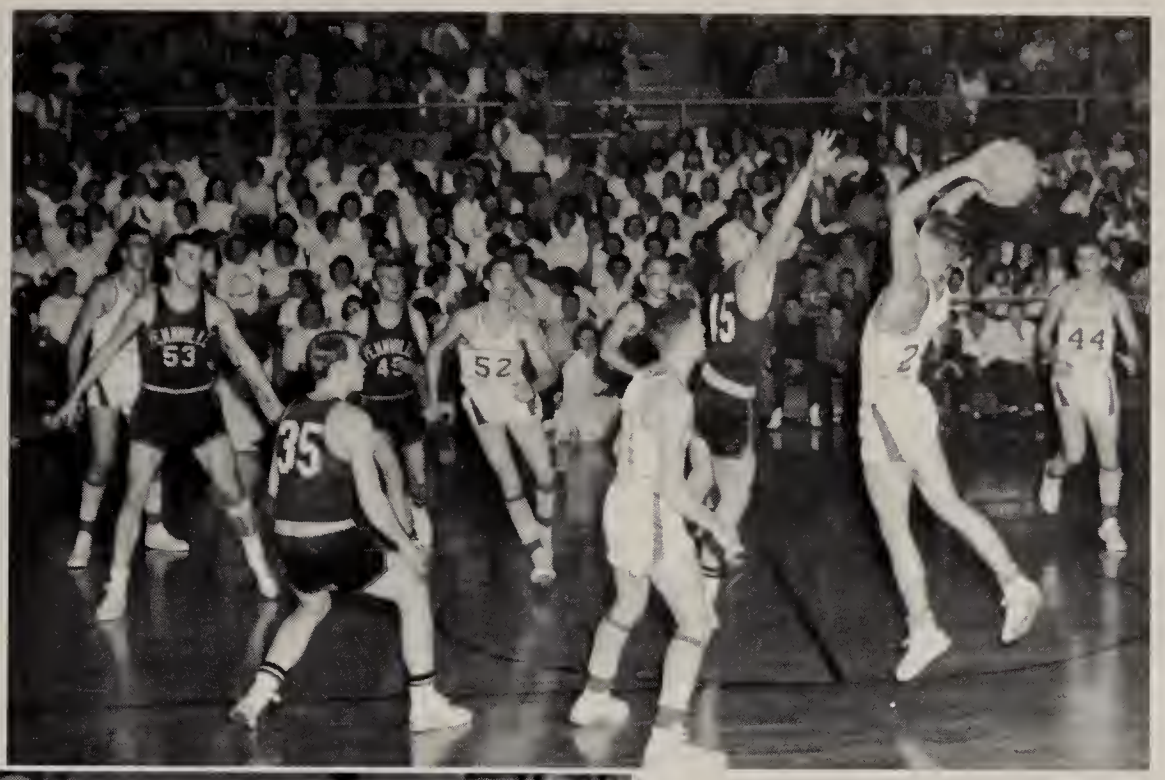
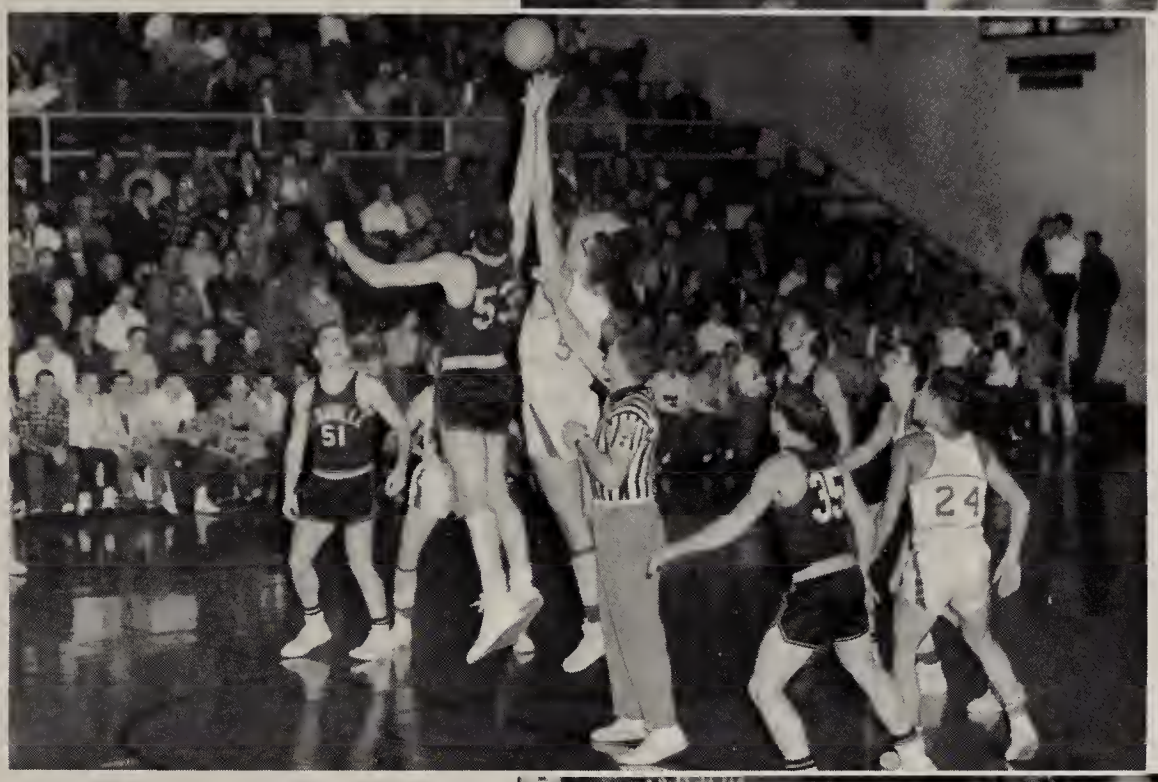
Cagers Almost Break Even

ED HIRSCHY quickly sets the screen for Lloyd Knittle's field goal attempt.

Central's hardwood quintet took off very slowly. However, as the season progresses, the wins started to come. The Greyhounds played their way into the final game of the county tournament, but were eliminated there. In the sectional they were beaten in the first round of play. They finished the season with an 11 win 12 loss record.



DON SHARP attempts to convert a much-needed fielder.



DICK HABEGGER strains for an extra inch to control the tip.

GARY WORKINGER goes after an important rebound.

Reserve Teams Blaze Winning Trails

The Greyhound second team this year took off with a bad start. However, they picked up a more expedient total of wins as the season and experience progressed. The junior high team didn't wait to get the ball rolling. They won many games during the season, and also a four-way tourney. The freshman team as well had a strong start. They piled up an 8-0 record before suffering their first defeat. With this type of strength coming on, it would be truthful to say that A.C. will become a real basketball power.

Track

On the whole, Adams Central had a very good year, athletically. The baseball team was runner-up in both the county and conference competition. The cross country team set a fast pace for the two-mile grind by capturing the conference championship, and taking the runner-up spot in the county meet. The track team proved to be the winningest one in Central's history. During the entirety of the season, the cindermen defeated thirty-two teams and lost to only two. This feat gave them the second consecutive county and conference track crowns.
